Local Web Design Agency Receives Two Dottie Awards Recognizing Outstanding Web Site Design and Development in Northern California

El Dorado Hills, CA – NetPilot Web Solutions, an El Dorado Hills-based Web design and online marketing agency was recently presented with two Dottie Awards, recognizing outstanding Web site design and development in Northern California.

NetPilot was chosen to receive two Dottie Awards for the design and development of the Food Bank of El Dorado County Web site (www.foodbankedc.org). The Food Bank Web site received a Dottie Award for the Non-Profit Organizations category and received a “Top Dot” Award for best overall Web site for the entire awards competition. Another Web site designed by NetPilot, The El Dorado Hills Community Services District (www.edhcsd.org), made the finalist list.

Now in its 10th year, the Dottie Awards honors the accomplishments of Northern California-based businesses, governmental agencies, organizations and individuals that represent the most creative, innovative, and user-friendly Web sites on the World Wide Web. This year’s awards ceremony was held at the Towe Auto Museum in Sacramento on March 8, 2007. Judging for the 2007 Dottie Awards was conducted by a panel of 36 industry experts with substantial expertise in their given fields. Teams of judges reviewed and evaluated every site using five criteria: purpose, content, navigation, design, and construction. Of the original 205 nominated sites, 54 were chosen as finalists in 16 different categories. More information about the Dottie Awards can be found at www.thedotties.com.

“The Dotties does a great job of recognizing the hard work of those involved with building and maintaining Web sites in Northern California. My agency is thrilled with this honor and humbled by such outstanding competition,” remarked John Merry, owner of NetPilot Web Solutions.
